

New Physicians in New York: Who's Leaving and Why?

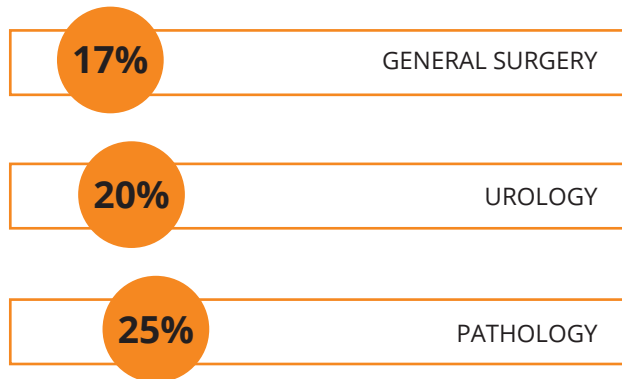

Results of the Survey of Physicians Completing Training in New York in 2022

Less Than Half (48%) of New Physicians Trained in New York Stay in New York

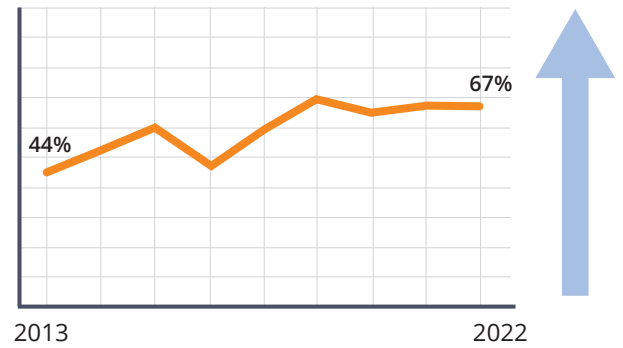

In-state retention highest in:

In-state retention lowest in:

In-State Retention of Family Medicine Physicians Has Increased Over the Past Decade

76%

Of New Physicians From New York* Plan to Stay in New York to Practice

* Graduated both high school and medical school in New York State.

Primary Reasons Why New Physicians Leave New York

To be closer to family (25%)

Better salaries outside New York (13%)

Better jobs in desired location outside New York (9%)

Overall lack of jobs in New York (9%)

Better jobs in desired practice setting outside New York (9%)